Junior Girl Scouts conduct fly-up ceremonies

Members of Junior Girl Scout Troop 2012 planned the refreshments, were in charge of set-up and clean-up, and served as hostesses for the combined investiture and fly-up ceremonies conducted recently at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center.

Invested by leaders Mary Kay King and Sue Clayton were Elizabeth Sagehorn, Joelle Goebell, Kirstin Seaborn and Stephani Aldrich.

Brownies flying up to join the Scouts were Tiffany Clayton, Merideth Canham, Jacquie Gardner, Merideth May, Kari Nations and Annie Smithson.

Badges awarded during the rites included sewing, Trina Clayton; world games, Erika Radon; water front, Joelle Goebel and Tiffany Clayton; gypsy badge, Danielle Pallastrini and Ingrid McDonald; and collector's badge, Erika Radon.

The busy troop also hosted a family Halloween costume party at Tularcitos School. All parents came in costume and participated in a variety of games including the bubble gum relay.

The event coincided with Jennifer Lindsay's birthday, so Jennifer shared her birthday cake with the Scout families and special guests, her grandmother and an aunt and uncle.

Valley Lions sponsor

White Cane Weekend

Pin a White Cane to your lapel this weekend as a token of your support for the Carmel Valley Lions Club service project for sight conservation.

Chairman of the local club and his committee will be at the Carmel Valley Post Office, the Carmel Valley Market and Mid-Valley Safeway with canisters to accept donations during the annual drive for funds.

All donations will be used for the Blind Center in Pacific Grove to assist with its programs and crafts; the Sight Conservation Center in San Jose and the Sight Conservation Center in San Francisco.

Donations in any amount will be welcomed by Maury, Frank Catalano, Murray Marshall, Clarence Castro and Ralph Morrow.

Glory Condon

Catalina Brownies

Glory Condon, a Garzas Road resident, will be assisted in leadership tasks by Renee Knight and Donna Fernandez for Brownie Troop 2049—Santa Catalina second graders—this year.

The troop hosted its investiture recently at the school with parents, teachers, and a special guest, principal Frances Foley in attendance. In order to turn their Brownie pin right side up, a new member must perform a good deed. Serving refreshments to their families and friends righted each child's pin.

Among those from the Valley and Peninsula invested were Molly Condon, Sally Evanson, Sherry Mouton, Kristine Fernandez, Mary Katherine Garcia, Tibbi Gurney, Rene St. Amour, Kristin Gray, Valerie McClure, Dana Knight, Shalom Story and Alexandria Lehr.

Barbershoppers elect officers

The Monterey Cypressaires Barbershop Chorus was in harmony with the unanimous choice of Richard McFarland for president of the organization for the coming year.

Valleyite Ed Powers will serve as membership vice president; Jim Hendricks, program vice president; Jim Marcum, secretary; Lilac Lane resident, Vic Harber, treasurer; and board members are Gene Smith, Ted Pflueger and Jack Laycox.

The barbershoppers may be heard at 8 p.m. Saturday at Sunset Center in Carmel.

Mary Kay King attends Scout conclave in Denver

Representing the Monterey Bay Girl Scout Council at the National Girl Scout Council Meeting in Denver was Valleyite Mary Kay King. The conclave, conducted once every three years, was attended by 7,000 delegates from all over the world who exchange ideas, elect international officers, and update the Scouting program.

One of the innovations derived from this council was the change in the Girl Scout emblem. The well-known Trefoil will now encompass sketches of two Scouts facing the future.

Mary Kay was delighted to meet the woman from whom she had received her initial Scouting training in Germany 20 years ago. She also renewed acquaintances she had met through the program from all over the world.

Keynote speaker for the convention was the Vice President's wife, Joan Mondale.

Saturday from 1 to 3

Fire department open house

The Carmel Valley Fire Department will dedicate its new fire house with an open house Saturday from 1 to 3 p.m.

According to volunteer Capt. Fran Hughes, there will be a brief dedication ceremony at the station house at 1 p.m. After that, the station will be open for inspection.

The department will have served during the open house. The station is located on Via Contenta near Pilot Road in Carmel Valley Village.

Sigel appointed to assist publisher

Joseph A. Sigel, a newspaper executive from Pittsburgh, has been named assistant to the publisher of the Carmel Valley Outlook.

His appointment was announced by Albert M. Eisner, editor and publisher of the newspaper. Sigel will be involved in the operation of the three weekly newspapers published by Carmel Communications Corp. They include the Carmel Pine Cone and the Monterey Peninsula Review.

Sigel, 29, previously was the publisher of Sun Publications, which publishes three bi-weekly newspapers in the Pittsburgh area. He started the newspapers six years ago.

He has a master's degree in business administration from the Carnegie-Mellon Institute in Pittsburgh and a bachelor's degree in mathematics from Syracuse University in Syracuse, N.Y.

Sigel, living in Carmel Valley with his wife, Lili, said, "I relocated to Carmel in great part because of the climate and beauty of the area."

Valley woman studying in Heidelberg

Minnie Marshall of Carmel Valley is studying at the University of Heidelberg in Germany under an exchange program. Miss Marshall is a student at Sonoma State University in Rohnert Park.

Her stay will extend through the academic year. A total of 423 students from the 19 state universities were selected for the exchange program.

Harvest Fair

IT IS UNUSUAL not to find a crowd of young people hanging out at Schwartz Memorial Park in the middle of Carmel Valley Village. The tiny park, popularly known as "Times Square" to Village residents, is one focus of merchant concern about vandalism and malicious mischief in the community. (Michael Stang photos)

Valley merchants express concern

Vandalism increases in Village

By KEN PETERSON

MERCHANTS IN Carmel Valley Village are looking for new ways to deal with juvenile crime in the area.

Concerned about increasing vandalism, some of them are considering hiring a private security patrol for the Village at night. It would supplement the two sheriff's units and the one from the California Highway Patrol. The three cover the length of the Valley from Highway 1 to Cachagua.

Other merchants question whether there is enough enthusiasm or financial support to pay for the patrol.

Lack of money already has struck the Carmel Valley Youth Center, which aims to prevent juvenile problems by giving kids an activity center they can go to.

The board of directors at the center ended its contract with full-time director John Harrison at the beginning of November because it was running out of money. Harrison had been on the job for five months.

Until the center's finances are more stable, it will remain open Friday through Tuesday with volunteer help, according to Rudy Lamar, youth activities chairman on the board.

THE INTEREST in extra police patrols and the juvenile problem in general was touched off when landowner Barbara Mark wrote the sheriff's department and Supervisor Sam Farr about the situation.

In the eight weeks since Sept. 21, windows were smashed at Tulareitos School twice; Joe Chaples, owner of the Oak Deli on Carmel Valley Road, had his automobile tires slashed; a brick planter under construction at the White Oak Shops in the Village was kicked in and a sign at the shops torn down; and three homeowners near the Village had, respectively, their tires slashed, house windows broken and mailbox dismantled. In one case, two teen-age boys were apprehended and charged with damaging the planter. Another youth was implicated in a tire-slashing incident.

The sheriff's department put its special enforcement detail on duty in the Village last month to control the problem. The team of four officers is shifted around the county to cope with spates of local crime. According to Monterey substation Capt. Harvey Nyland, the detail was removed after one eight-hour Friday night shift.

Mrs. Mark owns the White Oak buildings on the south side of Carmel Valley Road at the east end of the Village. In addition to the damage to the planter, several hundred dollars worth of plants were stolen from the shops during the summer just as Mrs. Mark was repainting and improving the property.

She said her hope is for a private patrol service financed by all Village merchants and a clean-up campaign where children might be paid to do work that improves the appearance of the community.

"I don't want to be a one-man crusade," she said. "I would like to see something happen."

JOHN TOBIAS, owner of Village Liquors and president of the Valley Chamber of Commerce, is skeptical about how much can be done.

"People are aware of (the problem) and would like to do something," he said. "As a chamber, we haven't done anything. We have not gotten together to pony up the dough for a private patrol."

The problems that exist, he added, are "neither more nor less than in the last three, four, five years."

Dr. Ed Marcucci, a dentist and head of the Village Committee, said the committee may organize a public meeting on the issue soon.

The Village Committee is an informal auxiliary to the chamber of commerce. It is trying to muster support for activities to improve the character and appearance of the Village.

Dr. Marcucci said he would want some indication before any meeting that merchants would support a private patrol or other measures.

The focus of many recent complaints is a small park area with benches at the corner of Carmel Valley Road and El Caminito, right next to the Bank of America.

Called Richard Schwartz Memorial Park,

it is known in the Village as "Times Square." It is a favorite hangout for teenagers. Longtime Village residents claim it is a center for drinking and drug dealing. It also is the focus of vandalism, its wooden benches carved up with initials and messages.

LT. JACK LUTSCHACH, assistant commander of the Monterey County Sheriff's substation in Monterey, said in most cases his deputies are helpless to do anything.

"Our problem is that most things are misdemeanors," he said. "If they don't happen in our presence, we can't do anything. We may see a lot of beer cans, but we can't tell who has been drinking."

The youths know this, he said, and also know they cannot be forced to go home because of curfew violations. Recent changes in the curfew and loitering laws have all but taken them off the books.

"Many youngsters openly defy our deputies," Lutschach said.

The sheriff's department does have one tool: the trespass law. Lutschach has contacted merchants in the Village to get pre-signed statements that they don't want anyone on their land after closing hours. Without that statement, the businessmen would have to come down in person and order a trespasser to leave before there is a violation of the law.

Lutschach said the department also needs more public cooperation in reporting crimes.

"Law enforcement is only as effective as the citizens it serves," he said. "Many people who see (a crime) don't get involved."

"It's very difficult to take one car with two sets of eyes and have them see everything in the Valley. It's physically impossible."

Frank Bottaro, juvenile unit supervisor with the Monterey County Probation Department in Monterey, said he hears "a considerable number of complaints" about juvenile problems in the Village.

Many of the problem individuals are out of high school, he said, ranging up to 19 or 20 years old.

"They don't live at home. They may work at jobs or trades," Bottaro said. "A lot of them live higher up in the Valley. The Village is the closest place to come, drink and carouse."

More police patrols might solve some problems in the Village, he said, but it would be "like squeezing a balloon. They would pop out somewhere else."

"At least," he added, they wouldn't hassle the merchants."

Bottaro said it is "unfortunate" the county does not put more emphasis on delinquency prevention.

"We handle things after the fact," he said.

THE CARMEL SCHOOL district has the same problem reaching potential offenders, according to community counselor Linda Nations.

The complaints she hears also are directed against the 19- and 20-year-olds. "We have no contact with them," she said.

Another problem she mentioned is that "ripping off is big now with little kids. It's a way to be included, part of the current group of kids."

Mrs. Nations said one of the causes of juvenile problems is that "there is no consistent parenting." Many youths come from single-parent homes or homes where both parents work and don't have time to spend with their children, she said.

Lutschach agreed that parents contribute to the problem.

"Part of the reason (the youngsters) don't have anything to do is because that's the way they were brought up. I hate to say it, but it's true," he said.

"We need more activities for them," Mrs. Nations said. "The youth center is doing more than ever. It's done terrific things."

Informed that the center no longer has a full-time director, she reacted with dismay.

"There is grant money for delinquency prevention they could get," Mrs. Nations said. If that is a problem, she believes the community would gather behind the center and underwrite its costs.

"The Valley is capable of that," she said.

Traffic pattern change proposed for Carmel High

A change in traffic lane patterns might be the only short-range solution to the safety problems around Carmel High School.

District Superintendent Carl Wilsey told the school board Tuesday that Caltrans representatives were not encouraging when he discussed the problem with them last month.

He had the talk because the trustees are concerned about the volume of high-speed traffic around the high school. Since there are no marked pedestrian walkways along the side of Highway 1, trustees fear a student will be killed or injured while coming to school.

But Wilsey said the only solutions offered by Caltrans engineers would be costly and take a long time to put in place.

Their proposals were a pedestrian underpass at Ocean Avenue, an overpass across Highway 1 or possibly a third lane on the highway from Ocean Avenue to Rio Road.

They also were looking for support for the Hatton Canyon freeway project, which would direct the traffic load to the canyon below and to the east of the school.

Wilsey said an overpass would be "unsightly" and Trustee Elizabeth Bell said the underpass would require so much supervision that the school might benefit more just by having a traffic crossing guard on the highway.

Board Chairman Clayton Neill Jr. said the main problem he sees is with cars speeding up as they head south on Highway 1. This is caused, he said, when cars jockey for position as the road narrows from two lanes to one south of Ocean Avenue.

He said Wilsey should talk with Caltrans again about narrowing the road just north of Ocean Avenue. This, he said, might slow the cars down enough to reduce the danger of an accident.

But, Neill added, "Someone will probably have to be hit before anything is done."

Wilsey said he also will inquire about having a pedestrian walkway built on one side of Highway 1 so students can have a safe place to walk to school.

Funding approved for language instructors

The Carmel school district came through with funds this week to support a program that brings teachers from other countries to work with foreign language classes in the district.

With most employee contract negotiations complete for the year, District Superintendent Carl Wilsey told trustees the district could afford $300 to support the Amity Aide program. The trustees agreed on a 5-0 vote.

Carmel High School Principal Dan Stevenson said he would provide an additional $150 from his personal budget toward the program.

Teachers and parents interested in the program still must come up with another $140 as the basic fee to bring an Amity Aide to the district, plus find a home for the teacher and provide $10 per week allowance and daily lunch money for the individual.

They need approximately another $340 for all those expenses.

Under the program, the foreign teacher rotates among Carmel Middle School and high school classes, discussing his home country and assisting students with their foreign language instruction. They stay with the district for a semester. Carmel has had an Amity Aide for the past five years.

EIR's available to the public

Environmental impact reports for two major Carmel Valley developments will be available for public reading by mid-December, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors learned last week.

Planning Director Ed DeMars told the board that private consultants have been hired to prepare EIRs for the Vista Nadura and Valley Hills subdivisions.

Vista Nadura proposes creation of 258 homesites and a 14-acre horse center on the 1,298 Anita Doud ranch. The property is on the north slope of Carmel Valley, adjacent to Carmel Valley Manor and just west of the Mid-Valley Shopping Center.

Larry Seeman and Associates will prepare the EIR for the project at a cost of $17,600 to developer Nader Agha of Pebble Beach. The report will be ready to circulate for public comment by Dec. 16, DeMars said.

The Valley Hills subdivision proposes 31 single-family homes and 42 condominiums on a 47.5-acre parcel of prime agricultural land behind the Valley Hills shopping area on Carmel Valley Road near Quail Lodge.

Environmental Impact Planning Corp. will prepare the EIR. Developer Al Saroyan Jr. of Fresno will be charged $4,300 for the report. It will be ready for public circulation by Dec. 22, according to DeMars.

Upper Valley Advisory Committee

New members confirmed

Planning Commissioner William Peters won confirmation a week ago for six new Upper Carmel Valley Advisory Committee members.

The Monterey County Planning Commission accepted his appointment to replace the members who resigned en masse in September because of procedural disputes with the planning department.

Peters filled six of the seven vacant seats. He has not decided between two candidates for the seventh spot.

Named to the committee were:

- Hilary Marble, Rama Creek Ranch, a member of a long-time ranching family in the Valley east of Carmel Valley Village.

- Ruth Pryer, Calle de la Paloma in Robles del Rio, a real estate agent and recording secretary for the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association.

- Don Middleton, 14 Aliso Road, a real estate agent and president-elect of the Carmel Board of Realtors.
- Timothy Brettan, 52 Miramonte Road, an architectural designer and native plant specialist.

- Roger D. Williams Sr., 300 W. Carmel Valley Road, a retired executive with General Motors Corp. now involved with three small businesses in the Valley.
- John Woolfenden, 60 E. Carmel Valley Road, freelance writer and retired editor of the Monterey Peninsula Herald. He is the only reappointment to the committee among the seven members who resigned.

Middleton, Brettan and Woolfenden were named to three-year terms. Williams and Mrs. Marble will serve for two years and Mrs. Pryer received a one-year term. Peters must appoint one more individual to a one-year term.

The committee reviews all projects which come before the planning commission and zoning administrator in the area east of Los Laureles Grade. It is charged with making recommendations for approval or denial of those projects.

The previous committee resigned, claiming its recommendations were ignored by the planning commission and that it did not have enough time to review projects before they were scheduled for public hearings.

Two-story maximum at mouth of Valley

Two stories will become the maximum height allowed for future buildings at the mouth of the Carmel Valley under a recommendation adopted by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors a week ago.

The board tabled and referred back to the planning commission a three-story office building proposed by Herma Smith Curtis and Henry Laskin.

The building is proposed for the new Carmel Rancho Post Office subdivision, but was rejected by the planning commission because it was designed to be 40.5 feet tall.

The commission used an informal 35-foot height limit as its basis for the denial.

After the use permit came to the supervisors on appeal, Supervisor Sam Farr of Carmel sat down with the developers and the Lower Carmel Valley Advisory Committee to work out a compromise.

As a result, the developers will be allowed some additional lot coverage and will scale their project back to two stories.

The compromise accepted by the supervisors also includes a recommendation that the advisory committee formally adopt the 35-foot height limit for the commercial areas at the mouth of the Valley.

Under current zoning, the maximum legal height in the area is 45 feet.

Redwoods in Carmel Valley

Loggers told to file impact report before starting work

By KEN PETERSON

A DEL NORTE COUNTY logging company was stalled last week in its bid to cut 375 redwoods in a Carmel Valley canyon whose beauty, one man said, is "equivalent to what you would see in a national park."

The Monterey County Planning Commission ordered an environmental impact report on the logging plan for Williams Canyon, an area south of Carmel Valley and surrounded by Rancho San Carlos.

The commission cited unanswered questions about grading and the traffic impact of the estimated 400 truckloads of timber that would be hauled westbound on Carmel Valley Road and up the Carmel Hill grade north on Highway 1.

The proposal by Westbrook Land and Timber Co. of Smith River, a town near Crescent City, calls for the trees to be removed over a three-year period.

The 40-foot long logging rigs would haul the trees off the 66-acre parcel above San Jose Creek along the private road out of Rancho San Carlos and onto Carmel Valley Road.

SEVERAL OPPONENTS of the Westbrook request cited existing traffic hazard problems at the intersection. They said the problems would be aggravated by the log trucks.

The trucks would drive west on Carmel Valley Road and eventually north on the two-lane grade up Carmel Hill.

"Highway 1 is already dangerously over capacity," said Maryann Matthews of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association. The intersection of Rancho San Carlos and Carmel Valley Road lies between a curve and a rise to the four-lane section of Carmel Valley Road. It is, she said, "one of the two or three most dangerous intersections" in the Valley.

Ralph Thompson, attorney for the Oppenheimer family which owns Rancho San Carlos, said the logging company would need to widen the private road through his clients' property to get the trees out. This would entail grading, which would damage the landscape, and removal of at least two large redwoods which restrict the width of the road now, he said.

"They are really going to do some very, very substantial damage," Thompson said. "Mr. (Arthur) Oppenheimer won't stand by and let them do it."

The area, he said, is "a gorgeous canyon, equivalent to what you would see in a national park. It would astonish you to see it in our county."

HANK WESTBROOK, a spokesman for the logging company, said his firm has taken trees out on more troublesome roads and there was "never a problem."

"We're trying to be good citizens in this community," he said. "We don't intend on coming down and ruining the people's environment."

But, he said, "everybody needs redwood for shingles, decks, siding and fences." Logging 375 trees would yield 1.5 million to 2 million board feet of lumber, he said.

Phil Nemir, a forestry consultant for the firm, said the company has a timber harvesting plan approved by the state. It requires reforestation of the area after the cutting. But several commissioners said it does not address the problem of impact on local roads or the effects of grading.

Commissioner Gary Varga said the plan also does not discuss the blight of logging in Williams Canyon. He called the area "some of the most breathtaking, pristine, beautiful redwood forest man has ever set eyes on."

The commission voted 5-1 for an EIR, with chairman Charmaine Cruchett opposed because he objects to the entire project.

Westbrook said after the vote, "You're talking here about pristine trees. I agree they're really nice trees. But we need lumber for our country. How many can we preserve?"

Carmel students to carry IDs

Carmel school pupils will have to carry their school identification cards with them on school buses because of an increase in misbehavior and vandalism this semester.

District Superintendent Carl Wilsey won trustee approval for the policy on Tuesday although board member Richard Wilsdon said it "smacks of Big Brotherism."

Wilsey said the policy is needed because bus drivers have had problems identifying miscreants so they may be referred to school officials and parents when they cause trouble.

If they are carrying identification cards, he said, it will be easier to learn who they are and take corrective action.

Wilsdon supported the policy, joining in a 5-0 board vote. But he expressed reservations about what he called a continuing trend in the United States to require citizens to carry identification with them at all times.

Adult school enrollment is down 50%

Enrollment in Carmel Adult School programs is down nearly 50 per cent this fall and the classes are almost self-supporting as a result of changes made in the wake of Proposition 13.

According to Dan Yurkovich, district director of community services, 698 students enrolled in 40 six-week classes this fall compared to 1,286 people in 73 courses last year.

At the same time, adult school cost the district only $11,000 this fall with revenues of $6,500. Last year the programs cost $17,800 and brought in $2,400.

The district board of trustees put all optional classes on a pay-as-you-go basis because of district budget cuts forced by Prop. 13. The mandated courses are financed almost entirely through state grant money.

Yurkovich told the trustees Tuesday night that people are more selective about which courses they take now, and are enrolling in fewer courses at the same time. All optional classes charge $1 per person per hour of instruction.

Pullen promoted

Bobbie L. Pullen has been promoted to operations officer at Bank of America's Carmel Valley branch.

Mrs. Pullen joined the bank in 1972 as a statement clerk at the Seaside branch. Last year she was promoted to operations assistant.

Pacific Grove, Carmel meet on football field

By EVE JACKLIN

ALL MEMBERS of the Carmel High School Site Council attended a workshop Wednesday. The council's major goal is improvement of the school through activities involving the community. The council is an advisory body to the principal and advises him on matters regarding school government. At the workshop, a list of priorities for the 1978-79 school year was devised and council members were taught how to take a "needs assessment" in both a formal and informal way.

The members of the Carmel High School Site Council are: Dan Stevenson, Louise Tanous, Bob Brooks, Julie Gallagher, Rochelle Davis, Marcia Green, Glenda Selle, Oliver White, Barbara Sanford, Debbie Kirk, Melissa Faia and Dawn Trygstad.

THIS WEEK is Pacific Grove Week at Carmel High School. This is a time when the decorating of halls, loud rallying, and overabundance of school spirit and general rowdiness prevail at the school.

The rival schools, Pacific Grove and Carmel, will meet in combat on the football field Saturday with Carmel acting as this year's host. To the victor goes the traditional "shoe" trophy. The junior varsity game will begin at 11:30 a.m. and the varsity game at 2 p.m. After the game, the basketball club will be sponsoring a dance. The dance will be from 8 to 11 p.m. in the gymnasium.

'Selling' high school sports is Carmel Booster Club job

JOHN PACK wonders if he can sell you 14 pairs of football shoulder pads.

You won't get to wear the pads. But if you invest $25 to join the Carmel Boosters Club, you'll sponsor the football players who do.

Pack, of Carmel Valley, owns a used car dealership in Monterey. How he got sold on the Carmel Boosters Club is beyond him. It might have something to do with his two sons, Jim and Bob, who played football at the high school last year. He is the club vice president. Next year he is scheduled to become president.

Right now he's the fast-talking "pitch-man" for a group of 100 parents and 80 merchants that are the Carmel Boosters. The club raised more than $5,000 this year in two months. The money purchased athletic equipment for nine Carmel High School boys' and girls' athletic groups.

It paid $271 for 25 soccer jerseys; $360 for 24 girls' swim team bathing suits, $600 for 16 sets of jerseys and pants for the junior varsity boys' basketball team. The club also chipped in $457 for 14 pairs of shoulder pads for the Padre football team.

THE MONEY didn't come easy.

It took some hustling, but Pack convinced 80 merchants to advertise in the Carmel Padre football program published by the Boosters. All merchant sponsors have their company names bannered across the bottom of each program. Most of the merchants are from Carmel.

Pack also coaxed 100 parent couples to sponsor the Boosters with the same $25 donations. Carmel City Administrator Jack Collins is listed as a sponsor. So is Representative Leon Panetta. Both have children at the high school.

That is the usual trend. The sponsors are primarily parents who have children at the high school, according to Pack.

"The parent participation at Carmel High School is incredible. You go to a football game in Gonzales and find as many Carmel people as those from the home team," Pack said.

The Boosters also raise funds through program and jacket sales at the football games. Some funds also are raised through advertisements posted on the outfield walls at the school's baseball field. Sponsors pay $150 each season for the advertisements.

THIS HAS been an especially critical year for the school's athletic department. Proposition 13 resulted in a 15 per cent cutback in the high school football budget. Funding was reduced from $1,300 to $1,100, according to Frank Lynch, the head coach.

"We simply couldn't have had an athletic program this year without the Boosters," he said.

Nearly $1,000 of that budget went toward cleaning and repairs of the uniforms, according to Lynch. The Boosters raised an additional $1,700 for the football team. That purchased shoulder, hip, thigh and knee pads for the players.

Gary Childs, president of the Carmel Boosters Club, sums up the group's purpose this way. "We're here simply to raise money." There is no showboating. There are no social affairs.

"They'd be using the same old uniforms over and over without us," Pack said. He emphasized that the funds go for all school athletics.

The Carmel Boosters Club was formed 15 years ago. Jim Kelsey of Carmel, a former restaurant owner, was a founding member. James O'Banion Handley, owner of Carmel Builders Supply, also has been a long-time sponsor.

Pack, 46, has been a sponsor for two years. He played high school football in Southern California. He owns John Pack's Auto Sales in Monterey. If you want to be a Booster, contact him at 394-6729.

Why does Pack put in 10 hours each week for the Boosters? "Look," he replied, "if nobody did it, who suffers? The kids."

Tests show rebound in scores from the grammar schools

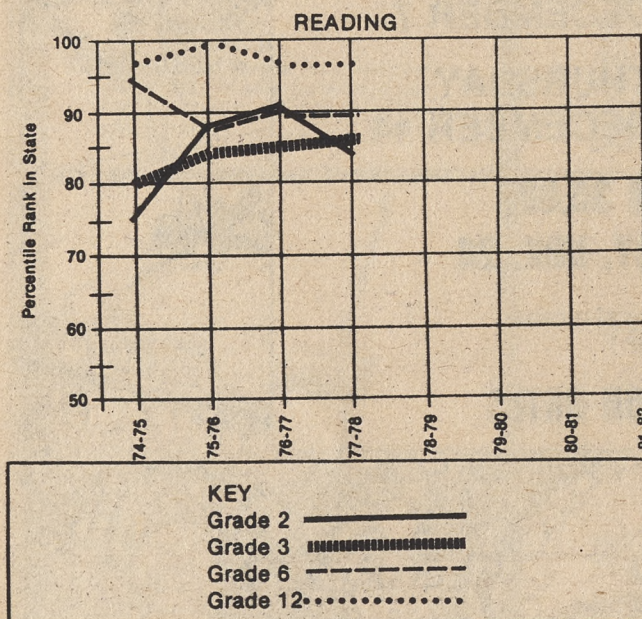

CARMEL HIGH SCHOOL seniors ranked in the top five per cent of California seniors in state test scores results released last week. But their scores are still below the level achieved by seniors in 1976.

Overall, Carmel second, third, sixth and 12th graders scored higher last spring than they did in the spring of 1976 in six of the 10 test categories.

Second and third graders were tested in reading. Sixth and 12th graders were tested in reading, spelling, written expression (including punctuation, use of language and sentence structure) and mathematics.

Among similar districts statewide, Carmel students have higher average test scores in six of the 10 categories.

Within Monterey County, 10 elementary school districts scored higher than Carmel in one or more test categories.

On the Monterey Peninsula, only Pacific Grove Unified School District sixth graders scored higher than Carmel. They had a better score on the state spelling test. Carmel High School seniors had the highest test scores in the county.

California second and third graders had scores above the national average on the reading tests. Using comparison data from 1973, they ranked in among the top 45 and 43 per cent nationwide, respectively.

Sixth graders, using comparative data from 1973, ranked among the top 47 per cent nationally in mathematics, the top 45 per cent in reading and the top 49 per cent in written expression.

Seniors in California still fall below the national average. Using 1970 data, they are in the bottom 35 per cent in reading, the bottom 28 per cent in written expression and the bottom 43 per cent in mathematics.

IN CARMEL, second grade reading scores dipped to 82.1 per cent correct answers in the spring of 1978, compared to 83 per cent correct in 1977. This still puts Carmel students in the top 15 per cent of California districts. The score falls in the range of 79.5 per cent to 83.9 per cent correct answers for comparable districts. Pupils statewide averaged 68.9 per cent. The Carmel score also is higher than the 80.8 per cent correct scored by district second graders in spring 1976 and the 75.8 per cent correct in 1975.

Third graders continued to improve their reading scores, answering 92 per cent of all questions correctly. This puts the district among the top 13 per cent in California. In comparable districts, pupils scored between 89.9 per cent and 92.6 per cent correct on the test. Statewide, the average was 82.2 per cent correct.

The third grade test scores have improved steadily, from 89.3 per cent in 1975 to 90 per cent in 1976 and 91.1 per cent in 1977.

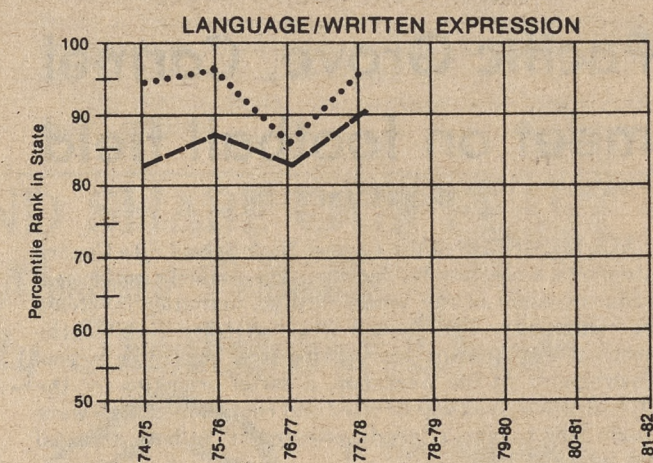

Test scores for sixth graders declined across the board in 1977, but rebounded to exceed 1976 scores in tests last spring. The sixth graders still do poorly in spelling compared to all California students, although they rank among the top 28 per cent of state school districts.

Sixth graders averaged 77.1 per cent correct in reading putting them in the top 12 per cent statewide. Their score was above the 72.5 to 76.5 per cent range for comparable districts and continued a three-year climb. Carmel pupils scored 76.3 per cent in 1976 and 76.8 per cent last year. The statewide average score in 1978 was 66.3 per cent.

IN WRITTEN EXPRESSION, the sixth graders averaged 77 per cent correct, ranking them in the top 8 per cent in California. The score was above the 70 to 74 per cent range for similar districts and was a dramatic increase over the 72.2 per cent average scored by Carmel pupils in 1977. The average score in 1976 was 72.6 per cent. Throughout California, sixth graders averaged 64.1 per cent correct.

Spelling scores recovered after a decline last year, but the 67.5 per cent average still is below the 67.9 per cent correct in 1976. Last year, sixth graders averaged 66.4 per cent correct on the test.

The Carmel score is within the 66.8 to 70.4 per cent range scored by comparable districts. Pupils statewide averaged 64.1 per cent correct.

In mathematics, sixth grade scores jumped to 69.7 per cent correct, putting them in the top 10 per cent in California. The state average score was 58.5 per cent.

Carmel pupils scored above the 62.5 to 67.5 per cent range for similar districts. They improved dramatically over the 66.7 per cent average in 1977 and over the 68.3 per cent score in 1976.

Seniors scored better than pupils in similar districts in three of four tests (reading, spelling and mathematics) and were within the average range on the fourth test (written expression).

IN MATHEMATICS, Carmel ranked among the top 1 per cent of California districts, the highest score possible. The seniors averaged 77.7 per cent correct, well above the 70.8 to 74.4 per cent range for similar districts. Pupils statewide averaged 66.3 per cent correct.

The Carmel score also ranks higher than the district's 77.6 per cent score in 1976. Last year, math scores slumped to 74.1 per cent correct.

In spelling, 12th graders had 74.3 per cent of the answers

Land use turnaround predicted

Shipnuck's win gladdens 'slow growth' advocates

By KEN PETERSON

THERE WERE SMILES on a lot of faces around Carmel when Barbara Shipnuck defeated incumbent Ed Norris last week for the Salinas district seat on the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

Elected in 1974, Norris, a former Southern Baptist preacher with eyebrows like butterflies taking flight, has been the most consistent and eloquent spokesman for property rights on the board.

He has come out in favor of projects in Carmel Valley and around Carmel consistently over the years. On a board that frequently splits 3-to-2 in its votes on growth, Norris always could be counted on to give the nod to plans for new development.

His surprising defeat, by an even more surprising 54-to-46 per cent margin, leaves "slow growth" advocates elated and developer spokesmen concerned about the future.

Almost without exception, they believe Mrs. Shipnuck will favor more growth controls in the county.

"I HAVEN'T HEARD such good news in years," said Douglas Despard, president of the 1,000-member Carmel Valley Property Owners Association. "Yells went up in the Despard household when the election returns came in."

Norris earned the enmity of the CVPOA for his unbridled enthusiasm for new development in Carmel Valley and his intolerance for the red tape and delays involved with environmental reviews of proposed projects.

In March 1977, for example, the supervisors rejected an interim ordinance to require special permits for all construction in Carmel Valley while the new master plan was being prepared.

During discussion of the issue, Norris said the county already is "overplanned and overcontrolled." There followed a comment that still raises hackles in the Valley.

"You can," he said, "use your property in any way you want to, short of a tanning factory."

With Mrs. Shipnuck on the board, Despard said there will be "a big turnaround on the board's vote on land use issues."

He said he has not had an opportunity to discuss specific issues in the Valley, but "I like her platform. I like what she stands for."

CARMEL CITY Councilman Howard Brunn, a member of the Carmel Area Coalition, said he is "absolutely thrilled and delighted" by Mrs. Shipnuck's election. When she takes office Jan. 2, he said, she will give the board "some much needed balance."

Maryann "Corky" Matthews, a member of both the CVPOA board of directors and with the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club, was unrestrained in her enthusiasm.

"It's the best thing that has happened to the Carmel Valley since Sam Farr was appointed," she said. "It's that big a change." Supervisor Farr of Carmel is regarded as an ally to the slow-growth advocates.

Mrs. Matthews said she has talked with Mrs. Shipnuck. The county's first woman supervisor admitted "environmental issues are not a major concern in the Second (Salinas) District."

But, Mrs. Matthews said, she "pays more attention to SUPERVISOR-ELECT Barbara Shipnuck reads the election news while awaiting the start of a special county supervisors meeting on growth management. She will take office in January. Seated next to her is Steven H. Sassoon of Carmel, foreman of the Monterey County Grand Jury.

how the people of an area feel" about development, something Norris seldom indicated in his votes on Valley land use issues.

"I'm confident she won't follow in that pattern at all," Mrs. Matthews said.

Salinas attorney Brian Finegan has represented major developers from the Monterey Peninsula and Salinas Valley before the board for years. A strong Norris supporter, he campaigned for the supervisor, did radio commercials and helped manage his re-election campaign.

Finegan said he anticipates a shift back to the slow-growth sentiment more evident on the board of supervisors in the past.

Land use decisions, he said, will "take longer, be more complicated."

In a classic understatement, he noted that, "I don't expect Barbara will be the spokesman for developers that Ed was."

The "friendly climate" for developers of the past two years since North County's Kenneth Blohm joined the board will be a thing of the past, Finegan indicated.

ATTORNEY MYRON "Doc" Etienne, another leading developer advocate in Salinas, had no ready comment about Mrs. Shipnuck.

"I presume she is a fair-minded person," he said. "I still think she should be given the benefit of the doubt" before he will say she is anti-developer.

Hellmut Meyer, executive director of the Monterey County Foundation of Concern, said his group is pleased with Mrs. Shipnuck's support for low- and moderate-income housing in Monterey County. The group has endorsed many of the major developments in Carmel Valley.

He, too, is keeping an open mind to see how she votes on other land use issues.

"Our attitude is to try and get along with any supervisor," he said.

DEVELOPER SUPPORT for Norris came out most clearly in his campaign contributions. He collected more than $5,600 from developers, contractors and architects, including $1,000 from the Cartco development firm. Nick Lombardo, one of the developers involved in the Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge project in Carmel Valley, is a member of Cartco. An additional $600 came from three executives involved in the Carmel Valley Ranch. Nader Agha of Pebble Beach contributed $150. He is seeking approval for the 259-unit Vista Nadura subdivision in Carmel Valley.

When Mrs. Shipnuck joins the board, Farr is scheduled to become the new chairman of the board. It is his turn to preside under the rotation system used by the supervisors.

He said her addition will not produce an "entrenched" 3-2 split on the board, but rather will add compassion to its decisions.

While Farr believes the board will commit itself to an effective growth management policy, he also expects developers to get a fair hearing.

"If we learned anything from Santa Cruz County, it's that you want to maintain that sensitivity," he said.

And Farr, who has been on the short end of many 3-2 votes in the last two years, said, "We're going to have some more fun. I'm going to enjoy it."

Growth takes a backseat to the need for low-cost housing, Shipnuck says

HOPES ARE HIGH in the Carmel and Carmel Valley area for new Salinas Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck. She defeated pro-development incumbent Edwin Norris by 800 votes a week ago Tuesday, a win viewed locally as a victory for managed growth.

Mrs. Shipnuck does have growth management high on her priority list. She wants a growth management policy in the Monterey County General Plan by the end of 1979.

But, in an interview with the Outlook, she pointed out that growth is not a major issue in her district. Housing is a top priority, especially for low- and middle-income families.

So, where development proposals are at issue before the supervisors, Mrs. Shipnuck said she will listen to developers and vote for or against their projects on their merits.

"I'm not no growth," she said, sipping coffee in the living room of her Salinas home. "I took great pains to tell everyone that, on the Peninsula or over here."

In fact, she said, one of her early contributors was the Salinas building contractor Bollenbacher and Kelton Inc.

"I bet they think that's the best investment they ever made," Mrs. Shipnuck said with a laugh.

SHE REFUSED to discuss specific proposals in the works around Carmel—Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge, Vista Nadura, the Odello resort hotel plan and others.

But she wants growth in the county managed with a specific policy.

"The board has been stalling for two years," Mrs. Shipnuck said. "I'd like to see us get working on it."

If the policy and the new Carmel Valley Master Plan are ready quickly, she said she would favor delaying the largest developments until they can be considered under those documents.

"If there is going to be a long delay, it's not fair to the developers," she added.

The growth management issues important to her are those "important to the people who already live here," she said. Protecting agricultural land and "keeping the quality of life we now have are, I think, things people feel are important."

"There will be growth," Mrs. Shipnuck said. "I'm looking to meet the needs of the people who are already here rather than development for development's sake."

But she could not say where this growth should occur.

INEXPENSIVE HOUSING and people-related services are her major interests, Mrs. Shipnuck said. She noted, for example, that fully 70 per cent of the people in her district couldn't afford to buy the homes they now live in if they were purchasing at current market prices.

She wants the county to help fill that gap somehow.

Mrs. Shipnuck also believes the county should spend more money on volunteer organizations which request county funds. Programs like Operation Brown Bag, Meals on Wheels and others get far more mileage out of a dollar than does the county bureaucracy performing a similar social service, she said.

This concern, "goes back to the fact that I've worked as a volunteer," she said. "I know how much people will do for very little money."

She will not be quick to use up county reserve funds for new programs or personnel, though. She wants at least $4 million to $6 million as a cushion to cope with the real budget crunch of Proposition 13, which she expects in 1981.

While Monterey Peninsula pundits analyze her victory as one of slow growth vs. wide-open development, Mrs. Shipnuck sees it as a victory for people-oriented government.

Her well organized campaign used "literally hundreds" of volunteers to get out her message, she said. And she wants the participation to continue after she takes office Jan. 2.

She believes the rest of the supervisors will have to look at their own conduct in office and responsiveness to their constituents if they want to win re-election.

One bad example the current board set came during the budget sessions last summer, Mrs. Shipnuck said. With dozens of citizen commissions working with different county departments, none of them were asked for recommendations on budget cuts.

MRS. SHIPNUCK said she will be able to operate with strength on the board because of her solid victory over a strong incumbent. She already has working relations with two of her colleagues—Chairman Dusan Petrovic and Sam Farr of Carmel—and will meet with Supervisors Michal Moore and Kenneth Blohm in the next week.

The 35-year-old housewife and former teacher will be the first woman ever on the Monterey County board.

Her husband, David, is an economics instructor at Hartnell College in Salinas. She has a bachelor's degree from Brandeis University and a master's in education from Harvard University. She attends Monterey College of Law.

A former president of the League of Women Voters of Salinas, she has two children, Louisa, 7, and Alan, 4.

Test scores rebound

correct. This is below the 75 per cent correct in 1976, but an improvement over last year's 73.1 per cent. The score puts Carmel among the top 5 per cent of all California schools.

The seniors tested above the 69.7 to 72.5 per cent range for similar districts, and well above the 68.4 per cent average for all California seniors.

The 12th graders rebounded from the lower 1977 score in written expression to score 68.9 per cent correct on that test. This is below their 69.8 per cent score in 1976 but above the 66.1 per cent in 1977.

They rank in the top 5 per cent of all California seniors on the test and are within the 65.9 to 69.1 per cent range for seniors in comparable districts. The statewide average score was 62.1 per cent correct.

ON THE READING test, seniors scored the same as in 1977, getting 70.5 per cent of their answers correct. This is a decline from the 1976 score of 73 per cent correct.

Carmel students still rank in the top 4 per cent statewide and scored higher than the 67 to 70.2 per cent range for comparable districts. The statewide average score was 63.3 per cent.

Statistics used to determine similar districts show that Carmel is in the top 6 per cent in terms of family income of pupils and among the lowest—the bottom 1 per cent by twelfth grade—in pupils receiving welfare Aid to Families with Dependent Children. Pupils do not move in and out of the district too often and there are few bilingual or minority students.

The Carmel district spent an average of $1,541 per pupil in 1977-78, with average class sizes of 25.7 pupils in the high school and 24.4 pupils in the lower grades.

Trustees react: Pleased, but emphasize spelling skills

Carmel students definitely are getting better at reading in the lower grades, while test score fluctuations in the sixth and 12th grades could be due to statistical error and have little meaning, according to Rich Hawkins, school district director of pupil personnel services.

The Carmel school district board of trustees greeted the report on state test scores with little comment Tuesday. Their major area of concern was to improve spelling at Carmel Middle School, where sixth graders recorded the lowest test score of any group of Carmel pupils.

Hawkins said his analysis of test results also points to weaknesses in alphabetization among second and third graders and in capitalization and punctuation at the sixth grade level.

District students test well in mathematics, but Hawkins added that the tests turned up weaknesses in geometry and probability and statistics among sixth graders. High school seniors were also weak in probability problems but strong in geometry.

Hawkins said the steady rise in reading test scores among both second and third graders means there has been "some real progress" in improving student skills.

Sixth graders have shown "some growth in writing" skills, but there is "no significant change" in their mathematical and reading abilities over the past three years.

The trustees commented on the spelling test score for sixth graders, which showed Carmel pupils in the top 28 per cent of all California districts. In all other areas, they were in the top 8 to 12 per cent. Trustee Elizabeth Bell said more attention is needed on spelling but noted, "As long as spelling is only important to parents, students aren't going to spell very well."

Middle School Principal Bob Hufford said all teachers of all classes, from academic subjects through shop, have been told to mark spelling errors on student reports. The effort over the past two years has, he added, made "little appreciable difference" on the spelling abilities of students.

Trustee Frances Gaver expressed pleasure at the test results. She added that "not everything that's important is easily measurable," including areas like the creativity of students.

"I don't think we ought to lose sight of that fact," she said.

Mrs. Bell was especially pleased with the improved writing scores at the sixth grade level, saying it shows the new emphasis on writing compositions may be paying off.

Hawkins told the trustees he will have other test results later in the year which will give an indication of how Carmel students are doing compared to pupils nationwide and not just in California.

No raise for teachers; fringe benefits added

The Carmel school district board of trustees approved a new contract with its teachers Tuesday night that increases fringe benefits, but not the 8 per cent raise the teachers wanted.

The board approved the one-year contract on a 5-0 vote. The Association of Carmel Teachers (ACT) requested the pay increase and binding arbitration of personnel grievances in its contract proposal of last spring.

The pay increase was ruled out by the wage freeze imposed when the state used surplus funds to bail out local governments after passage of Proposition 13.

The district agreed under the contract to reopen salary talks if the wage freeze is lifted by the state Legislature next year.

Girl's tennis team wins championship in Mission Trail Athletic League

By JAY POSNER

The Carmel High School girls' tennis team won the Mission Trail Athletic League championship last week, upsetting Santa Catalina School, 4-3, Nov. 8 in a playoff at Chamisal Racquet Club in Salinas.

The Padres played in the Region IV playoff finals yesterday in Santa Cruz. If Carmel won its match, it will advance to the Central Coast Section championships scheduled Saturday beginning at 10:30 a.m. on the UC Santa Cruz east courts.

In the playoff against Santa Catalina, the key Padre victory came in the number one singles match where sophomore Fiona MacKenzie upset MTAL singles champion Andrea Bohn, 0-6, 6-4, 6-3.

The other Carmel victories came in the three doubles matches where the teams of Ann MacDonald and Heidi England, Dara Bernstein and Cindy Landis, and Laurie McGlochlin and Laura Tanous were all victorious. McGlochlin and Tanous are undefeated in 13 matches this season.

The Padres, who finished the season 9-1 in MTAL play and 12-4 overall, also defeated Hollister and Gonzales last week by the same score, 6-1.

In the match at Hollister on Tuesday of last week, MacKenzie, Kathy Brodrick, Margaret Peavey, Tricia Martin and Karen Ildau all won singles matches, while Bernstein and Landis were victorious in doubles.

The Carmel High varsity football team will host Pacific Grove High on Saturday in the annual battle for the Shoe. Last Saturday, the Padres held off a late King City rally as they defeated the Mustangs, 21-14.

"We're ready for Pacific Grove," said Padre defensive coordinator John Whittaker, who took over the head coaching reins Saturday because Frank Lynch, the Padre head coach, was in Chicago after his father's recent death.

Carmel scored first midway through the first quarter after Bruce Robinson intercepted Frank Padilla's pass and returned in 34 yards to the 1 yard line. On the next play, Mike Odello plunged in for the touchdown and with John Lucido's extra point kick, the Padres led 7-0.

The scoring stopped in the game until four minutes into the third quarter when Dave Araujo ran 23 yards off tackle for the second Padre score. Whittaker pointed out that the right side of the Padre line—guard Tom Larson, tackle Mike Harney and tight end Bruce Robinson—opened up a huge hole for Araujo. The score came one play after Lucido returned a punt 22 yards to the Mustang 23.

King City cut the score to 14-8 on a 5-yard run by Dan McCarter and a two-point conversion pass after a fumbled snap from Padilla to Rodger Banuelos.

The Padres scored again with 6:49 left in the game on a 13-yard touchdown pass from Lucido to split end John Hollister. Hollister caught the pass on the four, but he put two fakes on the defender and went in for his first score of the year. Lucido's point after kick made the score 21-8.

"We threw well today and our receivers really ran good routes," Whittaker said of quarterback Lucido and receivers Hollister, Robinson and all-league candidate Mark Nottenkamper. Lucido completed 16 of 27 passes for 202 yards with Nottenkamper pulling down eight of those completions for 119 yards.

King City's final score came on a 25-yard pass from Tim Bernal to Fred Cabrera, but overall, the Padre defense did an excellent job. Whittaker gave special recognition to linemen Mike Matson and Pat Kelly, reserve middle linebacker Dave Oliver, and defensive backs Steve Selle, Clay Santini, Robinson, and Lucido, who intercepted a Bernal pass to ice the game with 50 seconds remaining in the game.

Benefit puppet show, concert, magic for Tantamount

A benefit puppet show, concert and magical performance is planned this Sunday to benefit the Tantamount Theatre Rebuilding Fund. The performances begin at 8 p.m. Nov. 19 at the Hidden Valley Music Seminars theater, Ford Road and Carmel Valley Road, Carmel Valley Village.

Included on the program will be a performance of the puppet play The Tempter, or The Sailor's Return, directed by Francois Martin. The play originally was scheduled at the Tantamount on Nov. 3, before a pre-dawn fire gutted the theater last month.

Also performing will be magician Ralph Verde, guitarist Steven Coyle and Larry Verza, a singer with the Hidden Valley Opera Company.

Tickets for the performance are $10 and include a wine reception. All tickets and donations are tax deductible.

Every Sunday through Christmas, the Tantamount company will screen movies at Hidden Valley as part of the fund-raising effort. Tickets for the films will be $2.50 each, including free coffee in the Tantamount tradition.

Tax-deductible donations toward the Tantamount Theatre Rebuilding Fund can be sent c/o Bank of America, P.O. Box 146, Carmel Valley, Calif. 93924.

Conference on Theater

The Northern Chapter of the American Theatre Association will host a three-day conference at the Carmel Holiday Inn, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel, Friday-Sunday, Nov. 17-19.

The public is welcome to attend. Admission is $10 for each session.

Stevenson students present 'Crucible'

Robert Louis Stevenson School students will present Arthur Miller's award-winning play, The Crucible, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Nov. 16-18, at the school, Forest Lake Road, Pebble Beach. Curtain is at 8 p.m. each evening.

Miller's memorable play is about the Salem witch trials and how a young girl's jealousy caused innocent people to be condemned to death. The Crucible, based on events in Massachusetts almost 300 years ago, was written as a searing commentary on the evils of McCarthyism in America in the 1950s. The movie version was made in 1958 in France because Miller was blacklisted in America and blackballed by Hollywood at the time.

Drama teacher Hamish Tyler will direct the production, which stars Katy King and Dallas Smith in leading roles. Others in the cast are Fred Begun, Heather Ferrill, Tina Meckel, Cathy Erskine, Sarah Hunter, Keith Campbell, Laurie Bryant, Celia Bernhardt, Joe Culp, Roxanne Sherif, Tex Colburn, Julie Hughett, Rick Foster, Kirk Briggs, Alan Lehman, Joe Quarto, Brett Hay, Kim Ataide and Mark Stross.

Admission is $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for non-RLS students. Proceeds will be used to defray costs of costumes, props and other equipment.

Barbershop concert Friday and Saturday

The Monterey Peninsula Cypressaires will present Mr. Music Comes to Town Friday and Saturday, Nov. 17-18, at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. The concerts begin at 8 p.m.

Free demonstration of holiday crafts Sat.

Six members of the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art will present a free demonstration of methods of making Christmas tree ornaments from throwaway items Saturday, Nov. 18, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Monterey Public Library, 625 Pacific St., Monterey. Everyone is welcome to attend.

The ornaments will decorate trees at the Festival of the Trees Nov. 30-Dec. 3 at the Monterey County Fairgrounds. To be shown are ornaments made from orange juice cans, old Christmas cards, empty cartons, flat cardboard and golden burlap angels and three-dimensional stars.

Some printed direction sheets will be available and there will be patterns to copy.

The program is sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art and the Monterey Public Library.

For more information, phone 372-7391.

'Barndance' Saturday at Barnyard

Exhibition square dancers and professional callers will perform at the Barndance in the courtyard of the Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel, Saturday, Nov. 18, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Everyone is welcome to join the free event.

Dancers from Santa Cruz, Monterey and Salinas will demonstrate the intricate and exuberant steps of square dancing as 20 professional callers direct their routines.

Beginners' lessons will be given and participants are encouraged to wear country casual clothes.

Homecrafters' Marketplace on Saturday

The eighth annual Homecrafters' Marketplace, the open-air craft festival for amateur craftsmen, is scheduled Saturday, Nov. 18, in the main parking lot of Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. Everyone is welcome to attend the free event from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Sponsored by Carmel's Sunset Community and Cultural Center, the fair allows individuals or non-profit organizations to display handmade goods. No commercial merchandise or enterprises are allowed.

Among the items to be sold at nearly 50 booths are jewelry, knitted items, children's clothing, ceramics, baked goods, wood crafts, crocheted gifts, plants and paintings.

MESSAGES CARVED in wood are silent testimony to idle hours spent in the "Times Square" park. Merchants in the Village want to organize more youth activities and increase police patrols of the community in a two-pronged effort to reduce juvenile crime. The unanswered question is whether they are willing to pay to solve the problem.

Carmel High sinks RLS

IN WATER POLO action, the Padres sewed up the MTAL title by routing Robert Louis Stevenson School, 10-2, on Tuesday of last week in Pebble Beach. Leading the scoring for the Padres, who finished the season 10-0, was Adam Sherburne with three goals. Carl Bresk and Art Strum each scored two goals while Mark Baldwin and Jeff Hogans scored one goal each. Peter Dew also played outstanding at goalie for the Padres.

The Carmel frosh-soph team also was victorious last week as they edged RLS, 4-3, in overtime. John Agan scored two goals, including the game-winning one for Carmel, and Dan Farrell and Mike LaFontaine added one goal each.

Carmel finished the season 4-0 in the MTAL and 7-3 overall.

Vandalism in Village

"They pull off big community things like that."

Harrison believes the center is a positive force that can reduce juvenile crime by giving youngsters in the Valley "something else to do."

"THE VALLEY is pretty much an isolated community," he said. "There's not very much for kids to do here except a few organized sports. So they turn to vandalism."

Harrison also questioned if Valley residents are willing to ante up the money and keep the center open.

"I think they should hire a full-time director and keep the center open seven days a week," he said flatly. "If they aren't willing to make that commitment, they have no right to complain about vandalism."

He doesn't believe the center will reach the "hard-core" teen-agers.

"But maybe, just maybe, it will keep one or two other kids out of trouble," he said.

Lamar said the center will keep going, using volunteers instead of paid help. And, he emphasized, fund-raising activities will continue.

Even so, he is uncertain if the center will hire another full-time director.

"The kids will have to prove they want it," he said. "They really tore up the place" in recent months.

Lamar doesn't believe that even a booming youth center will reduce juvenile crime much.

"You'll never stop that," he said. "With the youth center, maybe you're lucky if you reach two of them."

"If I could come up with an answer for juvenile crime in the country, not just Carmel Valley, I'd be the richest person in the world. I wish I had a magical solution."

Violinist Swensen will solo with symphony orchestra

Violinist Joey Swensen will be the soloist with the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra in concerts Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 19-21, in Monterey, Carmel and Salinas.

Concerts are scheduled at 8 p.m. Sunday at King Hall on the Naval Postgraduate School campus, Sloat and Third Streets, Monterey; Monday at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel; and Tuesday at the Salinas Community Center, 940 N. Main St., Salinas.

Swensen will play Violin Concerto in D minor by Jean Sibelius. After the intermission, the orchestra will play Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 6, "Pathétique." Music director Haymo Taeuber will conduct the orchestra.

The young violinist is the son of a Norwegian-American father and a Japanese-American mother, both professional musicians. He made his debut at the age of 7 and is a scholarship student at Juilliard School of Music where he studies with Dorothy DeLay. He has also studied with Isaac Stern, Itzhak Perlman and Pinchas Zukerman.

Swensen has performed as a recitalist and soloist with such orchestras as the Carnegie Hall Youth Symphony, the New Jersey State Symphony and the St. Louis Symphony. He was a first prize winner at the Aspen Competition and has also participated in the Casals Festival in Puerto Rico.

Tickets are available at the Record Cove, 425 Alvarado St., Monterey; Lily Walker Records and Music, 169 Fountain Ave., Pacific Grove; Carmel Music, Dolores and Sixth, Carmel; and at the box office on the evenings of the concerts.

For reservations or more information, phone 624-8511.

VIOLINIST Joey Swensen will be the soloist with the Monterey County Symphony in concerts Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 19-21. The concert will be presented Sunday at King Hall in Monterey, then repeated Monday at Sunset Center in Carmel and Tuesday at the Salinas Community Center, Salinas.

by Lucy Smithson

One mid-September morning we went down to the pasture and found a minor disaster. Boss Hoss, king of the wild ponies, was very lame.

Boss Hoss, who is 16 hands tall, considers himself to be the largest Shetland pony in the world. He delights in biting and pummeling the little fellows who share his pasture.

Apparently, Boss Hoss had a comeuppance. He had made one too many short charging runs at a pony and thrown his shoulder out of whack. Also his nose was out of joint and his temper out of sorts.

It was also obvious that he was out of the November dressage show. He needed a month's layoff. After the layoff he would need at least two months of building-up exercise to replace the muscle he would lose during the layoff.

Dressage is a demanding discipline. It is hard to say whether it is more demanding physically or mentally. To the horse, of course, it makes little difference. His little mind cannot cope with anything his body can't handle.

Ask a horse to bend his body when he can hardly bend his hock? He'll say "Huh? Whazzat?" Then he'll toss his head and switch his tail. This is called a resistance. What it actually means is he can't cope. Poor sweet dear.

So Boss Hoss was definitely out of the November dressage show. But how about his Second-In-Command? Boss Hoss's favorite pasture pal was a pony so large that with one more inch he would be called a horse. Young, strong, and a half-Arab besides. . . could he be ready for Training Level, Test 1 in just eight weeks?

Well, he'd had five years of tender loving hand-raising. He'd learned to trust humans. Right there the little Arab had a head start over most Thoroughbreds who are early taught (for racing purposes) to be misanthropes.

Then for the previous six months he'd had a number of new and enriching experiences. He'd walked hundreds of miles. He'd learned to trust, tolerate, or ignore loudspeakers, lights, grandstands full of people, trailers, strange horses, strange places, strange dogs, people, and strange drinking water.

He could handle mountains, narrow trails, picket lines, firecrackers, fire trucks, and even Carmel Valley Road. Mentally and physically the little horse could cope.

It was important to be ready to begin. Sure, Training Level, Test 1 is the lowest level of formal schooling. It's like ninth grade is the lowest level of high school.

You don't pull a kid out of nursery school and send him off to Carmel High School. He has to be ready. He has to grow up on the outside. He has to grow up on the inside, too.

Although the little Arab was mentally and physically ready to begin, we were about to ask a great deal from him in a very short time span. He had rarely had to carry an adult rider much less respond to one. He had never been "put to the aids," never been "ridden in a frame," nor asked to stretch, to bend, to accept the bit, to move forward, nor to "carry himself."

For the next eight weeks, except for trail riding, the little horse did nothing but circles. Big circles, little circles, right-about-face circles, bending circles, two-track circles, figure eights and serpentines. At all gaits. With no hands.

Yes, look ma! No hands. The little horse was learning to answer to the rider's leg. And answer he did. In a week he had stopped trying to speed up at the touch of a leg. Instead he gave that classical response which feels like slowing down. . . it means he was increasing his engagement.

Every time the rider pressed a leg to his side, his quick mind would respond: "We're about to turn and I'd better get this hind leg under me." It had taken Boss Hoss months to come to this same conclusion.

Of course, he couldn't pull the hind end under without pulling the front end down to balance. And when he'd stretched both ends down, there he was nicely "round." Maybe not First or Second Level "round" but well started.

We had frequent coaching sessions from three dressage experts. All had the same classical background; each had something different to contribute.

The penultimate lesson was four days before the show. "Well," sighed our coach, "he's not ready to go on straight lines. He'll fall apart." This turned out to be an accurate prediction.

"And there's NO WAY he can halt," she added. This was wrong—he halted several ways, all of them awkward.

"But go ahead in the dressage show," she encouraged us. "Everybody's got to start somewhere. And the usual place to start is Training Level, Test 1."

So last Saturday at the Fourth Annual Fall Show of the Carmel Valley Chapter of the California Dressage Society we did our thing. We did Training Level, Test 1 for a judge.

Were we wonderful? No. Were we satisfactory? Yes. Yes! Wonderfully, truly satisfactory! Maybe even a few points higher than satisfactory. Little horse, this may be the start of something big.

TINY BOOKS, each about the size of a penny, will be shown at the second annual Christmas in Miniature Show and Sale Sunday, Nov. 19, at the Monterey Conference Center, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey. Barbara J. Raheb creates the miniature books, many of which are bound with soft leather, and all of which contain condensed versions of the classics after which they are named. The type is large enough to be read without a magnifying glass by those with good eyes.

Christmas Bazaar begins with gala

The Christmas-by-the-Sea Bazaar to benefit the Behavioral Sciences Institute of the Monterey Peninsula will begin with an opening night gala Friday, Nov. 17, from 6-10 p.m. at La Playa Hotel, Eighth and Camino Real, Carmel. The bazaar will continue Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 18-19, from noon to 6 p.m.

Handcrafted Christmas decorations, gifts and home-baked holiday desserts made by members of community organizations for the bazaar's craft competitions will be displayed and sold at the opening night party.

Admission to the opening night gala is $7.50 per person. Admission is free Saturday and Sunday.

Mae Brussell to speak at MPC Wed.

Noted conspiracy theorist Mae Brussell will discuss the House Select Committee's investigation into the assassination of President John F. Kennedy Wednesday, Nov. 22, at Monterey Peninsula College lecture forum 103, 980 Fremont St., Monterey. The free program begins at noon.

The lecture, which will be conducted on the 15th anniversary of the assassination, is sponsored by the college humanities division.

Mrs. Brussell has written magazine articles, produced a series of radio broadcasts and given lectures on many college campuses. It is her conviction that the U.S. government covered up the truth about the assassination and that the current House Assassination Committee investigation is part of an ongoing cover-up.

Brendan voyage, lecture, film in Monterey

Timothy Severin, leader of the expedition that recreated St. Brendan's 3,500-mile voyage across the Atlantic 1,000 years before Columbus, will present a color film and lecture about the adventure, Friday, Nov. 17, at the Monterey Conference Center, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey. The program begins at 8 p.m.

Severin researched the saint's seven-year voyage that spanned the ocean from Ireland to Newfoundland according to Latin manuscripts of the sixth century. After reconstructing a sailing vessel of that age, made of 30,000 ox hides and 1,600 hand-lashed wooden joints, he and his four-man crew set sail on May 17, 1976, from Brendan Creek in Dingle, Ireland, and arrived in the new world two years later.

Coastal marsh topic of talk Tuesday

California's coastal marshes will be the topic of a lecture by Dr. H. T. Harvey, a member of the biology department at San Jose State University, Tuesday, Nov. 21, at Carmel High School, room 2, Highway 1 and Ocean Avenue, Carmel. The free lecture begins at 8 p.m.

Sponsored by the California Native Plant Society, the lecture will focus on Elkhorn Slough. The area was recently nominated by the California Coastal Commission to become California's first federal estuarine sanctuary.

Four things most people are in the dark about concerning solar energy.

1. "Solar energy is simple." True, when used as a heat source. Solar energy is already heating water and space. In fact, right now PG&E is involved in over 80 solar projects to help Californians make better use of these heating systems. But conversion of sunlight to electricity is something else again. Conversion systems are complex, and vast amounts of land would be required. For example, it would take more than 20 square miles for a solar plant producing as much electricity as a new coal-, oil-, or nuclear-fueled plant occupying less than one square mile.

2. "Solar energy is cheap." For warming yourself or some water, or even your house, yes—after the initial installation cost, which can be high. But for electricity, not so. Because of the tremendous technological challenges involved, experimental solar projects have not so far been able to convert the sun's energy into electricity in an efficient and affordable way for large scale use.

3. "Power companies, like PG&E, are deliberately blocking solar development." Quite the contrary. In addition to the 80 solar heating projects we're involved in, PG&E is supporting industry-wide research on solar electricity. PG&E is also a partner in building an experimental sunlight-to-electricity plant using advanced technology that will produce a small amount of power by the early 1980's. But the cost of this electricity will be about 30 times as much as that from a new conventional plant. So while we're working to develop solar electricity as soon as possible, it doesn't offer the solution to the power needs of the next 10-15 years.

4. "Solar electricity is imminent." According to government estimates, even by the end of the century, the sun will provide no more than 10% of our electric needs.

In the meantime, we must make the best use of power sources already available. Conservation will help—it's the fastest, cleanest and often the cheapest way to reduce the need for more power plants. But conservation alone is not enough. To meet the increasing needs of the 1980's, we will need government approvals to build conventional plants that use existing energy sources.

If you have any questions about Solar Energy, write PG&E, Box 3728, San Francisco, CA 94106.

Until solar electricity is ready, we must build other kinds of power plants.
